

Thinking Into The Corners™

Expand limits, Remove Filters, Find Solutions.

Take what you know about writing in your job and turn it on its head.

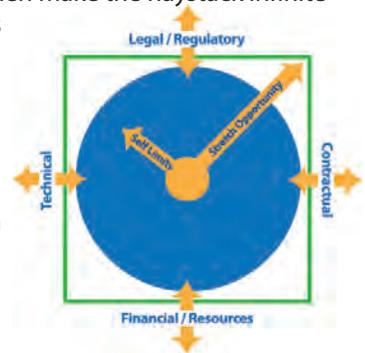

When you try to think outside the box your canvas is too large to anchor great ideas.

Your thinking gets spread thinly in an infinite space instead of focusing on the practical solutions.

Imagine trying to find a needle in a haystack. It's hard enough, isn't it? Then make the haystack infinite and it becomes impossible. That's what trying to think outside the box is like.

Instead, try thinking inside the box by setting the box limits. You can expand them as much as you can, but they are still the practical limits you have to operate under.

Then mitigate the filters you and your team have that prevents you from stretching beyond your comfort level and then you will start Thinking Into The Corners™.

Why attend?

This seminar shows why you should stop thinking outside the box and more importantly, describes how to set and expand the box limits. We show how the box isn't a limiting factor. It can be used to your benefit.

Then we review the limits and filters everyone has and identify how to mitigate those filters so 'stretch thinking' can take place and the solutions hidden in the corners can be reached.

Finally, the seminar discusses some of the typical problem solving and idea generating techniques and how they can still be used to Think Into The Corners.
